

Dear professors,

We would like to announce three upcoming University Alliances coding competitions for students starting in August:

- SAP Mobile App Competition: August 11-12, 2015 in Walldorf, Germany
The event is in English and accommodation for the students is covered. The prize is student tickets for TechEd Barcelona. All students age 18+ are welcome.
- SAP InnoJam: September 27-29, 2015 in Berlin, Germany
- The hybris Cloud HackFest: October 9-11, 2015 in Munich, Germany

These competitions will give students the chance to put their education into practice, tackle real-world problems with creative solutions and improve their team-working skills. As such, the hackathons are a great opportunity for students to improve their professional as well as social skills.

Who can participate?

We invite all students who are currently enrolled in a university, students of Computer Science, Business Informatics, Software Engineering, Digital Media, or a related information technology program that are highly motivated, and eager to apply their IT skills in a diverse team. As the students will need to develop a mobile application, basic programming skills are highly beneficial. As always we will also grant a small number of seats (approx. 20 %) to students with non-IT background, e.g. graphical and business skills.

Why should a student participate?

Students can increase their SAP technology knowledge, collaborate and co-innovate with fellow SAP enthusiasts, and develop prototypes of solutions to real business cases. It is a lot of work, with nearly no sleep but also a lot of fun.

We would appreciate it if you inform your students about this opportunity and promote our dedicated hackathon-website where all further information (incl. poster for promoting the events) can be found. We hope that we will be able to welcome some of your students at some of these events.

Best regards,

Jaka Crnivec
